Gallery Review

By Adrienne Emmering

The NY2CA, an intimate Gallery in Benicia, is located at 617 First Street. Open from Thursday thru Sunday from 12 to 5p.m., it features periodic shows by local artists.

This small Gallery can host some very large and important works. The current show, "Echoes of Alchemy- Bridging Past and Present" is on until November 17. This interesting show connects images from both the past and present with works by artists who have studied and delved all the way into the spiritual issues explored by the ancient world.

The two featured artists are Jane Yuen Corich and Kathy Kearns. Their works connect us with the past and present, all at once. Jane's work explores the boundaries of abstract expression. Kathy creates abstracted sculptures based on nature themes, and drawing on her considerable time spent as a student in Greece.

Jane Yuen Corich has one fine mixed media work "A Step Beyond". An imposing abstract featuring a human figure rendered in dark colors, the figure framed with the brightest and hottest of yellows and reds. This work challenges us to read into the image, and the colors, emotions and images that are at once intense, startling and possibly even erotic.

Kathy Kearns has one arresting item called "Wild Child", a wood-fired stoneware sculpture of a human figure, sporting a massive Medusa-like hairpiece, a thing both amusing and a bit scary at the same time. Most of her other works, most of them figurative, reflect her experience with Greek culture.

Contact the Gallery at (315) 945-7945.

The Gallery no longer features its jewelry collection, a great loss, since much of that work was very classic, elegant, and inventive.
